The entire insurance business model is being disrupted by technology and non-technology factors.

Industry has witnessed major shift in customer needs, behaviour and more importantly — the customer mindset – over the last few years, prompted by rapid increase in digital adaption. With more awareness among individuals, particularly in metros, it provides an opportunity to move from the traditional way of designing products and be more cognizant of these changes. Given the change, companies are continuously attempting to offer product solutions that are dynamic, future-ready and abreast with the newer world.
